

WATER CANADA

Do Overdosed Waterways Need a New Prescription?

Speedy Samples: A New Era
for Testing and Analysis

Abbotsford Defeats Proposed P3

Smartphone Apps Make Water Jobs More Fluid

INSIDE THIS ISSUE!

water's next

9

12

20

FEATURES

9 A Bitter Pill

New technologies could soon send overdosed waterways to rehab.
 BY SAUL CHERNOS

12 Savings at the Pump

Understanding the real energy efficiency of water pumps.
 BY FABIAN PAPA AND DJORDJE RADULJ

16 A Private (and Public) Matter

Is there a future for treatment plant P3s in Canada?
 BY ROBERT F. ANDREWS

20 App Savvy

Smartphone applications are making water sector jobs more fluid.
 BY TINA CHU

23 Failing Grade

A small University of New Brunswick student project uncovers a campus-wide problem.

COLUMNS

24 Groundbreakers

An exciting research partnership heralds a new era for water testing.

26 CWWA

Suggestions for streamlining environmental assessments.
 BY JENNIFER JACKSON

28 To Tap and Back

Instead of waiting for regulations around the new plumbing code, the CWQA takes voluntary action.
 BY KEVIN WONG

34 H2Opinion

ANTHONY M. WATANABE launches our new web column, Building Our Blue Future.

DEPARTMENTS

5 Editor's Note

A new year of opportunities.
 BY KERRY FREEK

6 Comment

GREG WILLIAMS suggests a new model for water innovation spending, while FRANCIS SCARPALEGGIA rehashes the need for a national water strategy.

7 Front

A shocking stat about livestock and manure, last issue's book giveaway winners, and responses to last issue's definition of "deleterious."

30 News Jobs, awards, partnerships, and moves.

32 Events CWWA tackles tough issues, OCWA releases the dragons, and our editor prepares to climb a mountain.

24

32

34